UPSIDE DOWN

A SHIP UNDER THE BEACH?
For years, people played on Southampton's beach without knowing an old War of 1812 shipwreck was buried beneath their feet! It wasn't discovered until pieces of the ship began poking through the sand.

Bruce's Caves weren't made by the lake you see there today. They were carved by the waves of post-glacial Lake Algonquin thousands of years ago, when the water level was dramatically different. So you can walk through places where waves once did the work.

Have a little fun
along the way!

TREES UNDER WATER?
Deep beneath the water near Tobermory are ancient trees still rooted where they grew thousands of years ago.
One found near Cove Island is about 7,500 years old!
The lake wasn't always where it is today.

WHERE'D THE WATER GO?
Near Dyer's Bay, a stream simply disappears underground! It travels through passages inside the escarpment before popping back out near the bottom about an hour and a half later.

SPIRIT ROCK
At Spirit Rock near Wiarton, take the spiral staircase down the Niagara Escarpment to the Georgian Bay shoreline — then look back up at where you started. The trails also wind through the ruins of the 17-room Corran mansion

SOUTHAMPTON
Find the giant 15-foot double helix at the Bruce County Museum. It's made from the anchor chain of the AZOV, a schooner abandoned by its crew in 1911 that then drifted across Lake Huron by itself before grounding at MacGregor Point.

LOOK UP!
Bruce County has 14 lighthouses along its shoreline.
Turn it into a family challenge:
How many can you spot during your adventure?

Which helps feed the jellyfish that use sunlight to make tiny algae living inside their tentacles pointing up? Spend much of their time upside down on the sea floor! Some jellyfish CHOOSE to live upside down!

& the grown-ups who love them!
WRONG-WAY CREATURE
Draw a creature with everything in the wrong place — feet on its head, eyes on its belly, tail on its nose.
Give your mixed-up creature a name.

What looks the same upside down?
